

Module 5 Coaching

Session 1 Fundamentals of Coaching

Initiating a discussion on Coaching

- Do employee know what they should do and how they do it.
- Does Performance Management is a matter of expecting tasks to be done correctly and on time
- If an employee is not able to perform then it means he does not know how to do it or his attitude is not good

- Coaching intervention help managers to improve their performance and ultimately the performance of the overall organization.
- Lack of transfer in learning and lack of sustained behavioral change pointed toward the need for more individualized, more engaged, more context-specific learning

Understanding Coaching

- Coach refers to the one who provides one-on-one coaching.
- Coachee refers to the one who gets the professional service; namely, it is the executive. Finally, in this article.
- Client refers to the stakeholders, including more senior executives and/or HR representatives.
- Coaching has traditionally been viewed as a way to correct poor performance and to link individual effectiveness with organizational performance
- It emphasizes self-awareness and learning by the one-on-one relationship between the coach and the executive

Inform > Teach > Guide > Recognize

Defining Coaching

- Coaching involves practical, goal-focused forms of one-on-one learning and behavioral change and also in groups as the preferred tool for behavior change
- The purpose of coaching is to produce learning, behavioral change, and growth in the coachee for the economic benefit of the client that employs the coachee.

Definitions and Purpose of Coaching

Kilburg (1996)

A helping relationship formed between a client who has managerial authority and responsibility in an organization and a consultant who uses a wide variety of behavioral techniques and methods to help the client achieve a mutually identified set of goals to improve his or her professional performance and personal satisfaction and, consequently, to improve the effectiveness of the client's organization within a formally defined coaching agreement. (p. 142)

Witherspoon and White (1996)

A confidential, highly personal learning process—an organized, personal learning provided over a specified period of time to bring about the possibility of effective action, performance improvement and/or growth. (p. 127)

Hall, Otazo, and Hollenbeck (1999)

A practical, goal-focused form of personal, one-on-one learning for busy executives and may be used to improve performance or executive behavior, enhancing a career or prevent derailment, and work through organizational issues or change initiatives. (p. 40)

Kampa-Kokesch and Anderson (2001)

A systematic feedback intervention aimed at enhancing professional skills, interpersonal awareness, and personal effectiveness. (p. 208)

The root of coaching (Maltiba et al. 2015),

Benefits of Coaching

- Improves quality and productivity
- Boosts enthusiasm and morale
- Strengthens relationships and communication
- Increases job satisfaction
- Improves teamwork
- Builds trust and enhances loyalty

Supervisor's Role in Coaching

A supervisor:

- Should be motivated to see the work group succeed
- Can use all information on hand
- Has opportunity to coach and counsel
- Has authority to carry out coaching
- Is responsible for unit's effectiveness

HRD Professional's Coaching Role

- Provides training for coaches
- Provides training to correct performance problems
- Provides organizational development support
- Coaching is an HRD intervention

The Role of the Coach

- Establish and clarify goals of the session
- Develop a plan to accomplish the tasks and responsibilities
- Ensure team members have a clear definition and understanding of their roles and responsibilities
- Align expectations with members of the team
- Advise, instruct, and demonstrate desired teamwork behaviors and skills
- Encourage and provide feedback for improvement

Difference between Coaching and Mentoring

	Mentoring	Coaching
Purpose	Diverse from socialization to management development	Improving performance through awareness and learning
Coach	Internal senior manager	External professional
Coachee	Diverse from lower level employee to high potential	Mostly executive and higher level manager
Process	Less structured and lack of mentor expertise	Systematic and structured
Focus	People centered	Issue and/or problem centered
Duration	Can last for a long time	Short-term

(Source: Jarvis, 2004)

A Conceptual Framework for understanding coaching

Session 2

Coaching for performance improvement

Coaching Strategy

- Present coaching concept to leadership
- Select coaches based on the characteristics and competencies of an effective coach
- Conduct a session on coaching for the appointed coaches
- Match coaches with team members
- Leverage current performance tools or create new tools to help coaches sustain a coaching environment

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Performance Management and Coaching

- Performance appraisal
 - The first step
- Performance management
 - Employee goal setting
 - Coaching
 - Rewards
 - Individual development

Source: Wells Doty, Ed.D.

Coaching to Improve Poor Performance

- Defining poor performance
- Responding to poor performance
- Conducting a coaching analysis
- Using the coaching discussion

Defining Poor Performance

- Definition: “Specific, agreed upon deviations from expected behavior”
- Performance must be evaluated against some standard or expected level of performance
- Standards and expected levels of performance must be known by the supervisor and the worker

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Types of Performance Standards

- Absolute
 - Same scale or standard is applied to all subordinates
- Relative
 - Performance is evaluated relative to the performance of others

Deviant Workplace Behavior

- Production deviance
 - Working slowly, leaving early
- Property deviance
 - Sabotage, lying about hours worked
- Political deviance
 - Showing favoritism, gossiping
- Personal aggression
 - Harassment, abuse, stealing, etc.

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Coaching for Poor Performance

- Consider causes
- Encourage employee input
- Work to develop solutions
- Renegotiate goals and objectives
- Agree on an action plan
- Schedule follow-up sessions

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Responding to Poor Performance

- Causal Attribution Theory
 - People assign causes to behavior
 - Different actions are likely based on internal versus external attributions
- Fundamental Attribution Error
 - Assumes or attributes behavior comes from a cause within a person
 - Supervisor may overlook other causes

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Role of coaching, drivers and focus

Coaching for ...	Driver(s)/scripts	Coaching foci	Duration
Knowledge/Skills	Need to acquire or sharpen the knowledge, skills, abilities or perspectives that enable effective action in current task. "I need to sharpen my skills for ..." "I know how, yet I don't always do 'x' well"	Executives work with coach to Assess current knowledge/skill level; Clarify expectations for current role/tasks; Prioritize the executive's project/tasks related needs; Plan for skill building to enhance effective action; and/or Improve (to some extent) learning agility	Short term—one or more sessions over several weeks or months (laser coaching)
Performance	Need to correct, sustain, or improve outcomes and results in current job or role. "There is pressure to improve" "I need to do a better job at" "I'm not aware of my impact on"	Executives work with coach to Assess current competencies and related deliverables for current job/role; Clarify success indicators and performance metrics; Plan for improvement and taking effective action; and/or Strive to realize a noticeable improvement in the executive's overall learning agility.	Short to mid-term (several weeks, months or quarters)

Role of coaching, drivers and focus

Role Coaching for	Driver(s)/scripts	Coaching foci	Duration
Development	Preparation for future job or role in terms of competencies and mind-set. Increased expectation of the executive becoming more open (i.e., able to entertain alternative perspectives), differentiated (i.e., able to draw more distinctions), and integrated (i.e., able to weave these differences into an increasingly complex whole). "I'm being groomed to advance . . ." "I'm considering a career move to . . ."	Executives work with coach to Assess current competencies compared to "success profile" of target role(s) or job(s); Clarify performance expectations of future role to inform focused development planning; Engage in a range of developmental job rotations; special projects, external professional development programs, feedback and executive assessment centers, etc.); and/or Improve learning agility to a significant extent.	Longer term (several quarters or more)
Executive Agenda	Triggered by broader, often more strategic and/or systematic, functional and/or organizational priorities (e.g., change initiatives; layoffs, downsizing, and restructuring; start-up, turnaround, realignment, or sustaining success). "We're facing a big challenge at . . ." "I need an objective, thinking partner for . . ."	Executives work with coach to: Clarify components of executive's agenda and prioritize each (e.g., situational analysis, align expectations, leadership style work, acquiring resources, professional development work, etc.); Support executive in focusing energy (related to learning, defense, and/or offense as needed);	Highly Variable (context and situation specific)

Critical Success factors for coaching

Clarity: clear framing of the executive's expressed need and related focus (i.e., coaching for skills/knowledge, performance, development, or executive agenda);

Conditions: supplementing the initial framing of the situation with assessment (i.e., data gathering from multiple sources, along with analysis and feedback) to determine if there is a gap between the executive's goals and reality (includes barriers and supports);

Commitment: agreeing to coaching contract by all key organizational stakeholders, including goals, roles, desired outcomes, and related progress indicators informed by assessment data and feedback; and

Continuous Improvement: engaging in ongoing cycles of action with intentional reflection to ensure that actions achieve the desired results, including celebration of successes and making adjustments as needed.

Session 3

Coaching Analysis and Techniques

Coaching Analysis

- The process of analyzing the factors that contribute to unsatisfactory performance
- Deciding on the appropriate response to improve performance

Steps in Conducting Coaching Analysis

1.	Identify the unsatisfactory employee performance.
2.	Is it worth your time and effort to address?
3.	Do subordinates know that their performance is not satisfactory?
4.	Do subordinates know what is supposed to be done?
5.	Are there obstacles beyond the employee's control?
6.	Does the subordinate know how to do what must be done?
7.	Does a negative consequence follow effective performance?
8.	Does a positive consequence follow nonperformance?
9.	Could the subordinate do it if he or she wanted to?

SOURCE: Fournies, F. F. (1978). Coaching for improved work performance.

Steps to Follow in Conducting a Coaching Analysis

- Identify the unsatisfactory performance
- Decide if it's worth YOUR time and effort
- Find out if the worker knows that their work is not satisfactory
- Does the worker know what is to be done?
- Are there obstacles beyond the worker's control?

Steps to Follow in Conducting a Coaching Analysis – 2

- Does worker know HOW to do the job?
- Does a negative consequence follow effective performance?
- Does a positive consequence follow nonperformance?
- Can the worker do the job if he/she wants to?
- Can the job or task be modified?
- What if the problem persists?

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

The Coaching Discussion

- Kinlaw's Approach:
 - Confronting or presenting
 - Using reactions to develop information
 - Resolving or resolution

The Coaching Discussion – 2

- The Fournies Approach:
 - Get agreement with worker that a problem exists
 - Mutually discuss alternative solutions to the problem
 - Mutually agree on actions to be taken
 - Follow-up to measure results
 - Recognize achievement when it happens

What if Coaching Fails?

- Transfer the employee to work that the employee can do
- Terminate for substandard performance
- Have adequate documentation of coaching efforts to support termination!

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Maintaining Effective Performance and Encouraging Superior Performance

- Must reward good performance
- Use:
 - Goal Setting
 - Job redesign
 - Worker participation
 - Job ownership

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Manager-Coach Responsibilities

- Provide evaluation
 - Self-evaluation can be difficult
 - People often focus on their weaknesses
- Manager-coach can:
 - see the big picture
 - make suggestions for improvement
 - reinforce company values

Source: Werner and DeSimone, 2006

Coaching techniques

— Facilitation

Demonstrating what to do

The GROW model

– GROW:

- goal
- current reality
- options
- will

The GROW Model raises an individual's awareness and understanding of: their own aspirations;
their current situation and beliefs; the possibilities and resources open to them; and the actions they want to take to achieve their personal and professional goals

GROW Model (Graham and Whitemore)

